

ABSTRACT

A method for facilitating application reuse in web-based applications, said method comprising the steps of creating an application having parent and child components and using a linked application form in the parent to specify a link to either an arbitrary URL or a child application and, using an exit form in each child application to define flows that return from a child exit form and continue in the parent.